Law schools don't make intellectual giants

I HAVE AGREE WITH MR. RICHARD DE LA ROSA's statement that there is no correlation between the number of law schools and the number of intellectual giants in the Philippines. The Philippines has a long history of intellectual giants, but the number of law schools has increased over the years.

Wolfowitz refuses to resign over pay scandal

WOLFOWITZ

WASHINGTON—U.S. Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz announced a weekend of meetings of global financial policymakers in an effort to avert a looming scandal.

Wolfowitz on Sunday refused to resign as the development banker's campaign group announced it would sue to force him to resign over a pay scandal.

But the 50-year-old banker's spokesman said the secretary would remain in his job, with the defense secretary's pay scandal continuing to reign over his administration.

"The current situation is of great concern to all of us," he said, and said he would meet with the United States, Europe and other countries and to a statement of the bank's ongoing meeting.

"We have no intention that the bank can effectively carry out its mandate and mission in confidence and transparency with its shareholders of the IMF," he said.

The secretary said they would meet the findings of a review by the World Bank's executive board, the committee of 188 member states, which said that the IMF's board, which has a pay scandal, should be reformed.

Japan directed sex slavery, new documents disclose

TOKYO—A HISTORIAN SAID MONDAY THAT newly discovered documents from post-World War II trials of Japanese war criminals offer fresh proof the military directly forced Asian women into sexual slavery.

"The findings will likely cause a big re-examination of the military's role in the war," said the historian, who said the documents were found in the archives of the Japanese government.

He said the documents were found in the archives of the Japanese government, and that they were found in the archives of the Japanese government, and that they were found in the archives of the Japanese government.

"It says that it was to continue to be used by the military to force the Japanese women," he said. "The war ended on August 15, but the military continued to use the women."

"It says one of the men agreed to the demands that she work at a brothel, which was then called 'comfort women'."

Historians believe up to 200,000 women were used in brothels for Japanese forces during the war.

He said that in documents found in Japan, "comfort women" were used in brothels during the war.

However, the Japanese government has denied the existence of such a system, and has said that the women were not forced into sexual slavery.

REMITTANCES SENT BY OVERSEAS FILIPINO WORKERS (OFW) through banks surged by 25.4 percent to $1.1 billion in February from a year ago, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas reported yesterday.

The two-month total inflows for the first two months of the year to $2.2 billion, up 22 percent from the same period last year.

"The robust growth of remittances was achieved mainly on the back of banks' wider network, as well as enhanced and efficient e-payment services in OFWs," the BSP said in a statement.

The credit growth also led to increased higher dollar, thus higher-paid, Filipinos workers also contributed to the increase in the remittances sent by OFWs in their families in the Philippines.

Domestic budgetary, infrastructure projects and other lower-income workers need to improve their standard of living, but the government and the increased demand for higher dollar Filipinos workers could lead to higher remittances needed to improve the value of remittance inflows.
